"AND NOW, September 30, 2004, following argument on the appealability and finality of the trial court's order in the above-captioned appeal, the Court having concluded that the particular order in question is interlocutory and does not presently qualify as a collateral order pursuant to Pa. R.A.P. 313,¹ the appeal is QUASHED as interlocutory. (¹ - To use the words of counsel for the Department of General Services, we do not concur that the particular facts of this case support counsel's contention that the discovery "barn door is open," nor that the right to appeal will be irretrievably lost if the appeal is not allowed, given that the material has already been produced and appellant could pursue this issue following issuance of a final order in this matter.)"
